

Directions: On small groups you need to make improvements to these sentences. These are all mistakes that are commonly made. In some cases it's just swapping a simple comma for a period. In other cases you're rewriting parts of the sentence for clarity. Even once in awhile the verb tense is off (should be past tense). Basically, FIX THE WEIRD STUFF.

"That's cool," my Mom said, "What kind and how are you going to pay for it?"

---

My First Deer (This is their title...think of something more creative.)

---

You too," I replied as faintly as the message had been received trying not to scare any deer away.

I walk up to my stand as quiet as can be, trying to preserve the peaceful quietness of the wilderness. I look straight up at the 16-foot vertical climb ahead of me.

---

"You should really get a set of your own, you learned pretty fast," Bill exclaimed while my uncle agreed.

---

"You go over to the fence line," Bill says to Bob, "and you go like 50 to 60 yards away from Mitch," Bill says to me.

---

On my way to Shawano I remember the last time. I was darting down the trail at 40 mph and I looked back for a second and wham I get hit by this massive tree limb I stay in mid air as my snowmobile keeps going, I feel like my chest just caved in and my first instinct is not to move cause if some thing is broke I don't want to feel it.

---

Ice skating accidents are an every day occurrence in the world. In 2004 745 people died. In 2005 666 people died. In 2006 555 people died over 100 of the deaths were of children.

---

The reason that I fell is stupidity I was riding to fast for my skill at the young age of five.

---

Putting on my big blaze orange coat that smelt like a slaughterhouse for deer because of all the red stained blood spots on the arms.

---

Now it is me vs. the deer because he is running right at me for me to shoot.

---

When we reach the pile of dirt that now has three big bullet holes that you can't see because they are full of blood, I grab his antlers like a kid grabbing candy and start counting the big branches on his head and I counted eight.

---

As we get outside my cousin says "I am driving" I said back to him "I think that I should I have been driving go karts longer than you." He knew that it was true so he agreed. "Well ok," Kevin exclaimed. "Just don't drive stupid."

---

When I ran to the sideline coach Smith said with confidence, "Let's bunt." I asked back, "Are you sure?" Not knowing that I could do it for sure.

"Yes, this is the sign" He blurted back.

---

"Why what's wrong".

"Jacobs in surgery", as hard as possible she is trying not to cry.

---

If you haven't you should try it. Because shopping gets you excited and lets you interact with the surrounding environment.

---

Oh man I have to shoot this beauty my mind was telling me.

---

"Good-luck," he said sarcastically.

I meet my dad fifteen minutes later out in the cold-damp garage.

---

"O.K.," I said nervously, "Just radio when it gets light enough to shoot."

---

Haven't you ever thought that you were all that, and you could do anything.

---

Or even thought that you were superman and invincible.

---

"It's going to be alright honey." My babysitter said with a cringe on her face as she looked at my chin. Sniffling I murmured, "Okay"

"Hey, how bout some candy?" She said holding some tic tacs,

---